"When employees join an organization, they're usually enthusiastic, committed, and ready to be advocates for their new employer. Simply put, they're highly engaged.

But often, that first year on the job is their best. Gallup Organization research reveals that the longer an employee stays with a company, the less engaged he or she becomes. And that drop costs businesses big in lost profit and sales, and in lower customer satisfaction."(From the Gallup Management Journal)

During this session we will:

We will explore the importance of teambuilding in developing employee engagement. Engaged employees are key not only for higher efficiency and outstanding customer service, but they can also develop that strong corporate culture and team atmosphere that customers notice. Keynote speaker Jamie Barrow will:

- Discuss the trends behind employee engagement
- Provide you with simple to use tools to measure employee engagement
- Look at the relationship between leadership and engagement
- Help you develop strategies to increase engagement

Keynote Speaker: Jamie Barrow

Jamie is the Director of OMADA Teambuilding at Trinity Western University. OMADA Teambuilding is a program that is focused on developing teamwork and leadership through a variety of programs.

For the last 16 years Jamie has been developing leadership and teamwork in corporations, elite sports teams and schools. Jamie uses a unique approach of hands on activities to help people learn more about themselves and how they interact with each other. Participants appreciate Jamie's imaginative style and level of group participation in his seminars.
